Disorders and Bloodshed Did Not Mar the Day at St. Petersburg.

FUNERALS ARE HELD

SITUATION STILL GRAVE IN BALTIC PROVINCES, THE CAUCASUS AND ODESSA—FIGHT NOT AT AN END.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 5.—Sunday has passed in St. Petersburg without disorders or bloodshed. The Social Democrats and Revolutionists had planned a mammoth demonstration in connection with the funerals of those killed last week's riots and it was intended to form giant processions composed of the various industrial organizations in the suburbs and flying red banners over the bodies of the "martyrs" marched through the center of the city. Some processions were to unite at the Finnish cathedral, where the sermons of a crowd might be fired by revolutionary orators. Late last night, however, it became known that General Trepoff would not permit a big demonstration and the mayor had issued an order saying the streets were no place for airing of political grievances. Socialists called off their plans, declaring that they feared that this demonstration of the people was marked for slaughter for which they were not prepared at present. The people will give battle when ready, not when Trepoff wants it.

No Disorders.

Accordingly, the funerals were held in private and workmen attended incognito, dressed in various militia. The Nevsky Prospekt was blocked by a great crowd of people, but there was no attempt at disorder and no occasion for the use of the squadrons of Hussars, Cossacks and Cuirassiers held in reserve in the adjacent streets. The revolutionary leaders evidently plan a period of comparative quiet and speak of the great strike simply as a "maneuver" which forced the enemy to make concessions.

"We haven't any intention of ending the fight now," said one of them today. "We will organize and arm the people for the final struggle. We expected nothing from bureaucracy and only by a

THREE KILLED BY EXPLOSION

THIRTEEN PEOPLE ARE ALSO INJURED—THE DEAD ARE ALL CHILDREN.

GAS LEAKAGE IN BASEMENT OF BANK BUILDING RESPONSIBLE FOR THE ACCIDENT.

HAMMONDSPORT, Mich., Nov. 5.—Three children are dead and 13 people are injured, one fatally, as the result of an explosion here today which completely demolished the Minnis National bank. The dead are:

STEVEN GOODMAN, aged 12 years.
ALICE McGEE, aged 10 years.
EDWARD McGRATH, aged 12 years.

A gas leakage in the basement of the bank building was responsible for the explosion and loss of life.

The victims were all church attendants on their way home from Sunday school. Workmen were engaged to make repairs to the heating plant, and as they entered the building they detected the smell of gas. They thought little of the circumstance, however, and as they passed into further rooms each they struck a match to light a gas jet. There was a terrible explosion. The strangulters were blown through the doorway at the rear while the building collapsed, falling into the cellar a mass of ruins. A train was passing carrying cars on a side track near the bank and cars blocked the crossing when the explosion occurred. Many persons were standing on the walk adjoining the building of the bank and within reach of the debris. Some were killed outright, others died from death or serious injury. James Mullin was in his office in the bank building when the accident occurred and had a narrow escape.

PRINCE LOUIS CONTINUES TO RECEIVE MARKED ATTENTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Rear Admiral Louis of Battenberg was today the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Assistant Secretary Oliver of the navy department and Mrs. Oliver and tonight was entertained at a dinner given by Walter Beaupre Townley, chargé d'affaires of the British embassy, and Mrs. Townley. Both these functions were informal, and they were the only social features of interest in the day's program. The remainder of the time he spent mostly at the embassy where the prince is a guest of Ambassador and Lady Durand. During the afternoon, however, Prince Louis made several calls. The prince received a number of callers who desired to pay their respects in the course of the day, among them [illegible] by the Cabinet officers and their wives, at which Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to Great Britain, also was a guest of honor, the guests included British Ambassador and Lady Durand, French Ambassador and Madame Jusserand, Associate Justice Holmes of the supreme court of the United States, and Mrs. Holmes, and Attorney General Moody. Following the dinner tonight there was an "at home" to the officers of Rear Admiral Louis' squadron, now in Washington. Tomorrow is the last day on which Prince Louis will be in Washington. A trip to Mount Vernon in the morning will be the main feature. It will be made on the Dolphin and the prince will be accompanied by Secretary Root, Ambassador Durand and Captain Ryan. In the afternoon the prince will return to [illegible]

FEELING IS HIGH

Political Excitement in Philadelphia Intense---Parties Still Working Hard.

SHERIFF IS ACTIVE

ISSUES UNIQUE PROCLAMATION GIVING NOTICE TO ALL PERSONS NOT TO INTERFERE WITH OFFICIALS.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—The sheriff of the county of Philadelphia has issued a proclamation giving notice to all persons that they must abstain from interfering with the election officers in performance of their duties next Tuesday. The issuing of a proclamation of this character is rather unique. The proclamation calls upon and requires all citizens to render full aid and assistance to the deputy sheriffs appointed by the sheriff, whensoever they may be required so to do, to the end that the law may be respected and obeyed and the election officers and electors protected in the performance of their duties. James L. Mills, the sheriff, is the leader of the regular Republicans in the Thirteenth ward and is chairman of the Republican city committee.

Counter Charges Made.

In the campaign just closed, the Republican organization and the City party adherents have made counter charges of contemplated fraud and intimidation of voters and election officers. Col. Sheldon Potter, the director of public safety, who is a leader on the reform side, has instructed the police that they must see the election laws enforced, that they must prevent fraudulent ballots from being cast, and that they will be held responsible for every illegal vote found. On the other hand, the Republican organization is charging that the police are in politics, that they will intimidate voters, that they will arrest Republican election officers on false charges and in other ways exceed their authority.

To Protect Workers.

In this connection the organization has planned to have lawyers in every one of the 42 wards on election day to look after the Republican officers and Republican magistrates will be on hand to take bail in case Republican voters or watchers are arrested. The City party has also arranged to furnish bail bonds for the immediate release of any workers who may be illegally arrested on election day at the instance of opponents. A corps of lawyers will also be on hand at central headquarters to answer legal questions and defend party workers. The committee of 70, which organized the City party, made the announcement tonight that it would promptly prosecute all people committing fraud on election day and that $10,000 had been set aside to be paid in rewards to those instrumental in securing the arrest and conviction of election offenders.

MUCH ILLEGAL REGISTRATION

NEW YORK STATE SUPERINTENDENT OF ELECTIONS TO STOP FRAUDULENT VOTING.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—That a vast amount of illegal registration, especially in the down-town sections of the city, has been discovered by the agents of State Superintendent of Elections Morgan, was stated today at Mr. Morgan's office. In some instances the same individual appears to have registered more than a dozen times. The superintendent will obtain from the police magistrates tomorrow more than 14,000 warrants which will be served in the event of the persons named presenting themselves at the polls. In addition to these he will furnish the police with lists containing names of 2,000 persons against whom there is evidence of illegal registration. Every preparation has been made to secure complete harmony between the police and the state superintendent's deputies, 350 of whom will be on duty here on election day.

PORT OF HAICHAU IS OPENED TO FOREIGN TRADE.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Pekin says that China has opened the port of Haichau to foreign trade.

Mr. Satan—Really I had to add this new department for those insurance grafters. I had no place where the punishment quite fitted their case.

FORFEITURE SUITS BEGUN TO PROTECT PROPERTY OWNERS

The announcement in The Gazette yesterday of the filing of the suits by the Colorado Springs company against the landlords of the business blocks occupied by Otto Fehringer, Charles L. Zobrist and J. H. Harrison caused considerable surprise and favorable comment in support of the step taken. It is realized by the law-abiding people of this community that the actions have been forced upon the Colorado Springs company by the outlaw druggists and the steps to forfeit the property have only been taken with a view to protecting an overwhelming majority of home-owners in this city.

Many Precedents.

Between the years 1882 to 1885 other forfeiture suits were brought in the district court and other property was forfeited for the violation of the liquor clause. Subsequently when the liquor element became too bold, and openly defied the city authorities, the people asked General Palmer to take steps to enforce the terms contained in every deed to real estate in the city. While some of the landlords have refused to rent their valuable business property to liquor-selling druggists, and have even gone so far as to insert a clause in the lease that the lease becomes null and void in the event that the tenant applies to the city council for a liquor license, there are other landlords who have steadfastly declined to take any steps to stop the illegal sale of liquor by their tenants, although they know such sales to be a violation of the terms of the deed to their property as well as a violation of the terms of their lease.

Deliberate Action.

The action of the Colorado Springs company is deliberate and has been threatened for months and years, and the filing of the suits in court should create no surprise in view of the manner in which certain druggists have defied the law and the authorities intrusted with the enforcement of the law.

Some idea of the flagrant violations of the law may be obtained from the police records, which show that since March 8, 1904, Otto Fehringer, 431 South Tejon street, has been convicted of violating the liquor law no less than eight times, and has been fined an aggregate $2,000 and the costs in each of the eight cases. Since March 8, 1904, Otto Fehringer, 26 South Tejon street, has been convicted six times and fined in aggregate of $1,400 and costs, making a total of 13 convictions against Otto Fehringer in the last 19 months, and the total amount of fines $3,400 and costs, that will reach into the hundreds of dollars. Between the years 1892 to 1901 there were 16 convictions against Fehringer and the fines totaled $2,657.

Charles L. Zobrist, since March 8, 1904, to date has been convicted eight times and fined a total of $1,675, not including the costs of suit, and was frequently in the courts prior to that date.

J. H. Harrison has been convicted in the courts three times this year, the fines in the three cases amounting to $500, not including the costs.

In the face of these facts it can not truthfully be said that the Colorado Springs company is taking "snap" judgment, or is acting with undue haste, but rather that the forfeiture suits are brought as a last resort, and for the purpose of protecting the other people who have purchased property in this city with the belief that the liquor clause meant what it said.

More Suits Likely.

There is no reason for believing that the company will stop with the three suits already filed. The probability is that similar action against other property owners will be taken. The licenses revoked by the city council for the violation of the liquor ordinances included Otto Fehringer, 431 South Tejon street, the A. Jae Ward Drug association, 107 East Pike's Peak avenue and

CAMPAIGN CLOSE IS EXCITING; CANDIDATES ALL CONFIDENT

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Enthusiastic rallies by the Democratic party and Municipal Ownership League at the Hippodrome and at Madison Square Garden, respectively, marked the close of the political campaign tonight. An audience of 12,000 persons filled the garden and thousands of women and children surrounded the building and clamored for admission, defying the efforts of 400 policemen to preserve order. It was only after a troop of mounted men had slowly forced the crowd back that Madison avenue in front of the Garden was cleared.

There were similar scenes outside the Hippodrome, where, after the building had been packed to its fullest capacity and the doors closed, a crowd of more than 10,000 persons filled the adjacent street and fought to enter the building. The crowd was augmented by the arrival of several thousand men who had been unable to make their way into the Garden and for a while wild scenes of disorder prevailed. The police were again and again forced back, but finally, by sending squads of mounted men to ride along the sidewalks while men on foot advanced along the roadways, the streets around the Hippodrome were cleared. Throughout the disorder both at the Hippodrome and the Garden the police refrained from using their clubs. No one was seriously hurt and no arrests were made.

William Randolph Hearst was the principal speaker at the Garden, and was received with an outburst of cheering which lasted for nearly 20 minutes. Mr. Hearst evoked another great demonstration when he [illegible] at the [illegible] of his election was beyond question. A letter from Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia was read regretting his inability to be present.

At the Hippodrome the principal address was made by Congressman W. Bourke Cockran.

Final statements were issued tonight by Mr. Ivins and Mr. Jerome, and the managers of the latter also sent out an appeal for $10,000 to be raised for the campaign fund by noon tomorrow. Mr. Ivins said:

"With full and complete knowledge of the situation and in justification of the organization I declare that the morale of the organization workers, bred of confidence in my leadership and ultimate victory in sight, has never been better than it is today.

"There are not more than 360,000 Democratic votes in this city, divisible between the two Democratic candidates. They cannot be divided in such a way as to render possible the election of either if the Republicans themselves do not fall into the trap spread for them by their foes."

Mr. Jerome said:

"As the campaign closes I have but one feeling in my heart and that is overwhelming gratitude that I have been permitted to be part of a movement so stirring and significant. All over the country they see it as we do in New York, a fight on the part of the people to resume the power that justly resides in them and which unjustly has been taken away from them."

William Halpin, chairman of the Republican county committee, issued a statement tonight saying:

"The maximum number of effective votes, judging from the registration, which will be cast for Ivins, Hearst and McClellan will aggregate 891,000. Mr. Ivins will receive a total vote in the greater city of 217,000. Hearst and McClellan will divide the other 374,000 between them, Hearst having 204,000 and McClellan 170,000. Mr. Jerome will be elected by an overwhelming vote and it is not at all improbable that he will have a majority over all other candidates."

BOTH PARTIES CLAIM VICTORY

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—Although in former years state campaigns in Massachusetts have virtually ended on the Saturday night preceding election day, the program for this year is an exception, and the contest will be conducted with vigor up to midnight tomorrow. Triumph at the polls is predicted by both parties. The Democratic leaders claim that Charles W. Bartlett, the candidate for governor, will be elected, while the Republican campaign managers forecast a substantial majority for Curtis Guild, Jr., the party's standard bearer.

The most interest of the campaign centers in the contest for lieutenant governor. According to Democratic claims, Henry M. Whitney, the Democratic candidate, will be elected by a wide margin. The Republicans, however, say Ben S. Draper will win. The main issue has been reciprocity with Canada.

TORNADO DETAILS

Storm at Mountain View, Okla., More Severe Than Was Thought.

PATH IS NARROW

EIGHT KILLED AND THIRTY INJURED PROPERTY LOSS HEAVY—MANY BUILDINGS DESTROYED.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Okla., Nov. 5.—Eight persons were killed and 30 injured, four fatally, by yesterday's tornado. Following is the revised list of the dead:

W. T. WHITE.
FRANK W. CLARK.
J. S. BARKLEY.
MRS. JENNIE JONES.
MRS. W. M. HOLT and two small children.
MRS. ROBERT HULME.

The fatally injured: Mrs. Barkley, Ed. Hollis, Mrs. E. McBride and a child of William Holt.

Storm's Path Narrow.

No damage was done outside of the town. The pathway of the tornado is about 100 yards wide and one mile long, but in this small area the havoc was great. The Farmers cotton gin with heavy machinery is a complete wreck. In this building J. S. Barkley, employed as packer in the gin, was crushed to death. His body was found pinioned under the debris near the press, his head and shoulders crushed into the ground. The Barkley home, which was near the gin, was carried about 200 yards and dropped. Mrs. Barkley was found imbedded in the mud in the street, her head and face covered with wounds.

Heavy Property Loss.

Further to the northeast was the Shawl feed yard, where five horses were crushed to death. Adjoining the feed yard was the Hulme home, where Mrs. Hulme and her brother, Frank Clark, were found dead. The North Side hotel near this point is a mass of broken timbers. Directly east in the edge of the town is the wreck of a carriage in which seven members of the Hollis family were just leaving town, and which was struck by timbers. J. E. Hollis, Joseph T. Hollis, Ed. Hollis and John Gudon were severely injured by flying timbers from the gin. Ed. Hollis is thought to be fatally injured, as portions of the splintered timbers penetrated his body. The large two-story school house was lifted straight up in the air, turned completely over and crashed down upon the roof just beside the foundation. The Methodist church is also a complete wreck. The Christian church, which was used as a school building, was totally destroyed. Many residences were unroofed. The sides of some houses were crushed in.

COMPROMISE IS SUGGESTED

VENEZUELA WILLING TO WITHDRAW NOTE CONCERNING TAIGNY UNDER SPECIAL CONDITIONS.

CARACAS, Nov. 5.—The Venezuelan government on Saturday delivered to Mr. Russell, American minister, a note reaffirming the willingness of the government to withdraw its note concerning M. Taigny, French charge d'affaires at Caracas, if the French government, likewise, would recall its request that Venezuela withdraw part of its note which gave notice that Venezuela would not treat further with M. Taigny until he apologized for his statement that the French cable company had been treated unjustly. The note says the government will permit the French cable company to transmit cables from Caracas and coast offices if the company will undertake to make satisfactory arrangements with the government within eight weeks and that, failing to do so, the government will proceed with the execution of the mandate ordering the offices of the company.

QUEEN OF PORTUGAL THROWN FROM HORSE.

LISBON, Nov. 5.—The queen of Portugal was thrown from her horse at Cascaes on Saturday. Her injuries were slight.

PROGRESS IS MADE

Extracts From Report of Congo State Investigating Committee Given Out.

RADICAL CHANGES

COUNTRY RAPIDLY BUILDING UP—BARBARITY EXISTS TO SOME EXTENT—RECOMMENDATIONS OFFERED.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 5.—Following are extracts from the report of the commission appointed by King Leopold to investigate the conditions in the Congo Independent State and the charges made against the administration of the Congo:

"Our voyage to the Congo produced an impression of admiration and wonder. Security reigns today in a country which 25 years ago was plunged in barbarity, plundered by Arab tribes and strewn with markets for human flesh. The slave trade has now disappeared, cannibalism seeks hiding and human sacrifice has become rare. Villages have sprung up, railroads have been constructed to the head of the equatorial forests, steamers navigate the rivers, the postoffice and telegraph are in operation, hospitals have been established and governmental administration proceeds effectively in that vast territory."

Hardships Suffered.

Continuing, the report considers the charges which are under eight heads and says:

"The state was warranted in appointing tracts of vacant lands, but this led to abuses by which the natives were confined in narrow limits.

"The system by which the natives pay taxes in work requires strict limitations so that work shall not exceed 40 hours per month.

"The natives also suffer hardships in having to carry their tax contributions unreasonable distances."

Harsh Methods Criticised.

The report criticises the harsh methods of enforcing taxes, condemns holding women as hostages pending the non-payment of taxes, and says that to these customs is largely attributable the harshness of the native chiefs.

The action of the commercial com-

BLOODY FEUD IS THREATENED

MIDDLESBORO, KENTUCKY, EXPERIENCES A THREE DAYS' REIGN OF TERROR.

LAWLESS GANG OF FORTY MEN RESISTS MILITARY COMPANY—LEADER WANTED FOR MURDER.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 5.—A special to the Journal and Tribune from Middlesboro, Ky., tells of a reign of terror in the border line city that threatens to rival in violence the bloody feuds of Breathitt county. The Middlesboro military company spent Sunday afternoon in the mountains after a lawless gang said to be headed by Frank Ball, wanted for the murder of John Bolen, a barber. Ball is reported to have with him a crowd of at least 40 men who intend to resist his arrest to the last. Four miles from Middlesboro the soldiers today attacked a "blind tiger" and riddled it with steel bullets. They succeeded in capturing nine men. Returning to town, a roll-call showed the absence of three of the company, whereabouts are unknown. Tonight the town is comparatively quiet but all telephone wires have been cut except the line to Knoxville. Governor Beckham has been asked to send more militia and another company is expected tomorrow as the local militiamen are worn out by constant duty of the past three days. The Middlesboro company is in charge of Captain George W. Albrecht, a leading citizen who, up to September last was editor of the Middlesboro News. [illegible] both citizens and soldiers, and it is reported that a telegraph [illegible] warned not to send out news of the disturbance to any papers.

the Korsmeyer Drug company, South Tejon street, as well as the three druggists against whom the Colorado Springs company has already instituted forfeiture proceedings.

Value of Property.

The value of the property which the Colorado Springs company has asked the courts to grant it possession of under the forfeiture clause in the deeds is conservatively placed at upward of $80,000. A prominent real estate dealer, when questioned as to the values of the properties occupied by the certain drug stores, gave the following estimates:

The property at 109 North Tejon street, occupied by Druggist C. L. Zobrist, three-story brick block, second floor occupied by offices and the Henager business college and the third floor by the I. O. O. F. hall, worth $30,000.

Property at 322 North Tejon street, occupied by Druggist J. H. Harrison, two-story brick, the second floor used by the Halcyon rooming house, worth $42,000.

The Church property at 26 South Tejon street, occupied by Otto Fehringer, two-story building with furnished rooms upon the second floor, worth $20,000.

The Ady property at 431 South Tejon street, occupied by Otto Fehringer with the South End Pharmacy, one-story brick, worth $4,000.

The property of the Mining Stock association at 101 East Pikes Peak avenue, occupied by the A. Jue Ward Drug association, and consisting of a two-story brick building with offices on the second floor, was estimated to be worth $30,000.

The store at 8 South Tejon street, occupied by the Korsmeyer Drug company, and owned by the Exchange Building company, a two-story building with offices on the second floor, was valued at $20,000.

The failure of these in property deeds is by no means confined to the city of Colorado Springs, for press dispatches from Washington, D. C., bring the information that the titles to all Indian lands sold hereafter will contain a provision reading as follows:

"That no malt, spirituous or vinous liquors shall be kept or disposed of on premises conveyed, and any violation of this condition, either by grantee or any person claiming rights under said party of second part, shall render the title revertible and cause premises to revert to party of first part, his heirs and assigns."

WEST VIRGINIA MADE GOOD TIME

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The armored cruiser West Virginia, flagship of Admiral Brownson's squadron, made the run from South Pass, at the mouth of the Mississippi river, to Cape Henry, Va., when she brought President Roosevelt home from his southern trip, at an average speed of 17.92 knots an hour. But for the storm encountered off the Carolina coast the average would have been better. It was demonstrated to President Roosevelt that while the West Virginia was plowing through the great waves kicked up by the gale it would have been possible to have fought the broadside and stern guns, and an officer who was aboard said that by slowing down to ten knots an hour the bow guns could have been fought as well.

FORTIFICATIONS TO COST LARGE SUM

$16,000,000 More Needed to Complete Engineering Work of Strengthening United States Seacoast Points—Report Made.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Sixteen million dollars more will be necessary to complete the engineering work of the fortification of seacoasts of the United States under the plans of the Endicott board, according to the report of Brigadier General Alexander Mackenzie, chief of engineers. There already has been appropriated for this purpose $5,592,434. Permanent projects of 31 different points have been adopted and most of them are well under way. Among these points are San Diego, Cal., San Francisco, Columbia river and Puget sound.

The defense of the great lakes and the St. Lawrence river is under consideration.

The estimate for the completion of the fortifications do not contemplate anything more than the projects outlined by the Endicott board. Modern appliances and additional projects which may be adopted by the Taft board appointed last summer and the fortifications on the insular possessions may increase the estimates when the additional work is approved by congress. It is estimated that $4,265,334 will be required to put into execution by the engineer department the schemes of the artillery and signal corps for fire control of seacoast defense. The report says.

"While the general principles of the fire control system have been satisfactorily determined and adopted, the actual details on which costs largely depend are still in condition of experimental development by the artillery and it is anticipated that the cost of actual construction will probably largely exceed the above sum when such development is complete."

A tract of land on the Columbia river and one on Puget sound were acquired during the year. The total estimates for fortification works under the engineer department for the fiscal year 1907 amount to $11,424,153, divided as follows:

Construction of gun and mortar batteries, $4,000,000; modernizing older emplacements, $492,500; sites for fortifications and seacoast defenses, $500,000; searchlights for harbor defenses, $500,000; protection, preservation and repair of fortifications, $300,000; preparation of plans for fortifications, $6,000; supplies for seacoast defenses, $40,000; sea walls and embankments, $275,000; sea walls, defenses of Galveston, Texas, $1,433,853; casemates, galleries, etc., for submarine mines, $540,700; preservation and repair of torpedo structures, $50,000.

Defenses of insular possessions—Seacoast batteries, Manila, P. I., $2,000,000; seacoast batteries, Subig bay, P. I., $5,000,000; harbor Hawaii, $520,000; procurement of land for sites for defenses of the Hawaiian islands, $326,100.

An estimate of $75,000 is made for improvements in the Yellowstone National park.

Expenditures on rivers and harbor improvements in the United States reached $22,228,623. This does not include $2,265,613 under the Mississippi River commission. No estimates are made this year for river and harbor improvements save those provided for under continuing contracts. This amounts to $17,456,801, to which is added $15,000 to be expended under the California Debris commission and also an estimate of $2,000,000 for the Mississippi River commission. Among the estimates for continuing contracts are the following:

San Pedro harbor, Cal., $300,000; mouth of Columbia river, $300,000; Honolulu harbor, Hawaii, $200,000; Wilmington harbor, Cal., $100,000; Oakland harbor, Cal., $250,000; San Pedro bay, Cal., $81,000; Columbia river at The Dalles, Ore., $250,000; Columbia river between Vancouver, Wash., and the Willamette, Ore., $30,000; Columbia and Lower Willamette rivers, below Portland, $125,000.

HENDRICKS MAKES PUBLIC REPORT ON CONDITION OF EQUITABLE, JUNE 30, 1905

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Francis Hendricks, state superintendent of insurance, today made public a supplementary report by R. B. Hunter, deputy superintendent of insurance, and Commissioner Vanderpool on the condition of the Equitable Assurance society of the United States at the close of business June 30, 1905. The report first discusses the real estate of the society and places the value of its office buildings in various cities at $26,505,186, or $4,905,631 less than the sum at which they are carried on the books of the society. It is explained by the report that this reduction is made on the basis of the earnings which yielded six per cent. To the book value of real estate the company had acquired under foreclosure, the report adds, $28,189, making the total estimated value of such real estate, $1,644,500. Of the loans on bonds and mortgages, the report says they represent $4,521,222, and have an average earning of more than 4½ per cent and at no period of the society's existence has this class of investment been in a more satisfactory condition.

Large Amount Loaned.

The loans made by the company on the security of policies assigned as collateral amount to $25,865,890.50, according to the report, and the bonds and stocks owned by the society have par value of $195,000,567 as against a book value of $219,630,408 and a current market value on June 10, 1905, of $232,565,562. Cash on deposit at the close of business June 30, 1905, aggregated $29,879,068. Of this amount $8,822,320 was on deposit with the Equitable Trust company of New York, $6,475,891 was deposited with the Mercantile Trust company and $5,[illegible] with the National Bank of Commerce in New York.

Discussing the debit balances of agents which are assigned to trust companies and aggregate $3,813,185, the report states that they are not considered as admitted assets and are deducted from the cash on deposit, bringing the amount down to $34,066,368.

Books Incomplete.

The report discussed at length a payment of $600,000 in the form of a check drawn by the society to the Mercantile Trust company and dated February 4, 1904. As the books of the society did not show the consideration for this check, the report says, it was necessary for the examiners to consult with the superintendent of banks and look into the accounts of the trust company.

The records of the society showed that the account involving the $600,000 check was closed to profit and loss, on the society's books on December 31, 1904, and it was learned that the trust company credited on the "G. V. Turner loan" most of the money realized from this check. As this transaction and other transactions between the Equitable and the trust companies do not appear on the society's books, the report states that the collaterals for such loans are not included in the report as an asset, nor are the society's guarantees in such transactions charged against it as a liability. Of the society's records the report has this to say:

Records Not Correct.

"In the investigation of other matters where it became necessary to establish title of certain securities of which the society was at least custodian, the incomplete and desultory nature of the voucher records or authorizations in writing from the book entries connected with these transactions were so baffling as to render it practically impossible to ascertain the status of these securities as to ownership, until recourse was had to sources entirely independent of the records of the society."

Computing the assets of the society after making deductions noted, the report states that the admitted assets are $406,073,603 and the total liabilities are estimated at the same amount. In arriving at the total of the liabilities the total reserve, which includes the present value of all outstanding policies and annuities, is estimated at $338,886,123 and the reserve for unassigned surplus funds is placed at $62,008,624.68.

A table of interest rates shows that the society realized the following rates on its assets in 1904: on bonds and mortgages, 4.28 per cent; on stock and bonds, 4.37 per cent; rent rate on mean real estate, 2.27; interest rate on mean net assets, 4.33.

THIEVES CHLOROFORM DENVER WOMAN AND FIRE RESIDENCE

DENVER, Nov. 5.—Two unknown men brutally attacked Mrs. Mercy Mosconi in her home tonight and after ransacking the house, chloroformed the woman, set fire to the house in a murderous desire to hide their crime and escaped. Only the timely arrival of the woman's husband, David A. Mosconi, a well-known sporting man, prevented the consummation of the fiendish plot. Mrs. Mosconi had preceded her husband to their home and upon entering the house surprised the men at work. Both were masked and one leveled a revolver of the latest army pattern of her. The other then struck her down and quickly placed chloroform to her nostrils, rendering her helpless. Although the thieves turned every drawer and closet upside down, they found nothing of value except $10 in money and Mrs. Mosconi's wedding ring, which they took from her person. The money was removed from her stocking and in cutting away the woman's clothing the men carelessly cut her body in several places. The two thieves left the house by an upstairs window after setting fire to the carpet in one of the rooms. When the husband arrived at the house the flames were shooting through the roof and were also working their way to the lower parts. With the aid of a policeman he broke into the house and found his wife prostrate on the floor. She was taken outside and revived; when the story of the attack on her was told. No trace of the guilty parties has been found.

ANOTHER BENNINGTON VICTIM PAID TO RUSS

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Nov. 5.—The Roman Catholic church of Our Lady of the Consolation was filled to overflowing today upon the occasion of the funeral of Midshipman Joseph J. Gaunt, one of the victims of the boiler explosion on the Bennington at San Diego, July 21.

HEAD OF A GIRL FOUND IN HARBOR

IS BELIEVED TO BE THAT OF MISS SUSAN GEARY WAS IN LEATHER HAND-BAG.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—What is confidently believed to be the head of Susan A. Geary, the dress suit case victim, was recovered in a leather handbag from the bottom of the harbor today. It was dragged to the surface very near the point where Louis W. Crawford and William Howard, who have confessed to disposing of the dismembered body of the girl, said they dropped it from the stern of an East Boston ferryboat.

The head completes the body of the girl. The trunk was found on September 1, and the limbs were picked up on October 27. The leather bag in which the head had been placed together with 30 pounds of loose shot, apparently did not move from the place where it sank. The head was in a good state of preservation, and it is thought by the police that it will be readily recognized as that of Miss Geary.

The police today continued the search for Mary S. Bean, who is said to have had charge of the home in which Miss Geary died. The hunt for the woman was without result and it is believed that she left the city as soon as she learned of the arrest of Crawford and Howard. Crawford and Howard will probably remain in New York for several days until the necessary papers for their extradition are approved by Governor Higgins. Morris Nathan will be arraigned in court tomorrow on a charge of abortion. Dr. Percy McLeod, who was arrested in the Back Bay district on Friday for alleged complicity in the case, left town today for a few days. He is under bond of $20,000.

The police intimate that they have evidence to show that other similar cases have occurred in this city and that the bodies of several of the victims have been disposed of sectionally. When asked tonight concerning the alleged confessions of Louis W. Crawford and William Howard, the New York prisoners, Chief Watt of the bureau of criminal investigation, who has returned from that city, said:

"All I will say is that the confession of these two men is the most startling and sensational story I have ever heard. I do not like to think of it. It is a terrible story, and the most remarkable tale in all my years of police service I ever heard of."

The New York prisoners, Morris Nathan, who was brought here from Pittsburg, and Dr. Percy H. McLeod, who was arrested in Boston Friday, are all charged with the same crime, abortion.

THREE CREMATED IN FIRE NEAR DAYTON

DAYTON, O., Nov. 5.—Jacob Haugh, his wife and his son Jesse were cremated in a fire which destroyed their cottage eight miles north of Dayton early this morning. Oliver Haugh, another son, was seriously burned and was taken to a hospital.

REV. I. N. W. IRVINE ORDAINED AS PRIEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—With much ceremony, Rev. Ingram N. W. Irvine of Philadelphia, formerly rector of St. John's Episcopal church, Huntington, Pa., and unfrocked by Bishop Ethelbert Talbot, was today ordained as a priest of the Holy Orthodox Greek church in America at the cathedral of St. Nicholas, by Archbishop Tikhon, head of the Russian church in this country. Yesterday Archbishop Tikhon, assisted by the clergy of the cathedral, ordained Dr. Irvine a deacon and half an hour later he participated as deacon in the high mass celebrated in the cathedral. Dr. Irvine, having been previously received as a communicant of the Greek church after he had been refused a rehearing of his case by the higher authorities of the Episcopal church, Archbishop Tikhon decided that as he had come to the Greek church with the degree of doctor of divinity his application for ordination as a priest could not be refused under the canonical laws of the church.

Dr. Irvine, it is said, will be attached as a priest to the cathedral and confine his work among the English speaking members.

WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and skillful cures, a record such as no other remedy for the kidneys and bladder can claim, peculiar to itself alone, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

"I used four bottles of your Favorite Prescription and one of Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mrs. M. E. D. Shaver, of Johnstown, Lawrence Co., Pa., "and can say that I am cured of that dreaded disease, uterine trouble. Am in better health than ever before. Everyone who knows me is surprised to see me look so well. In June I was so low in health that at times I could not walk. Today I am cured. I tell everybody that Dr. Pierce's medicines cured me."

A PERSONAL ENCOUNTER

TREASURER KELLY OF KANSAS AND EDITOR OF DAILY JOURNAL HAVE FIST FIGHT.

TOPEKA, Kas., Nov. 5.—Thomas T. Kelly, state treasurer of Kansas, and Frank P. MacLennan, publisher of the Daily Journal, engaged in a personal encounter at the rooms of a popular lodge in Topeka early this afternoon. The collision was the result of the fight which Mr. MacLennan has been making on Mr. Kelly through his paper, the Journal. Mr. Kelly started the trouble today, it is said, by approaching Mr. MacLennan and abusing him. He ended up the tirade by aiming a hard swing at MacLennan's head. The blow glanced and MacLennan turned and retreated down the corridor. At this point Eugene Stotts, an employe of Mr. MacLennan's paper, ran to the rescue of his employer and struck Kelly twice without inflicting serious damage. Mutual friends then intervened and the men were parted. Treasurer Kelly protesting that the next time he met Mr. MacLennan he would not waste any time in conversation and that the effects would be more serious than the results of today's encounter.

After the trouble today Mr. Kelly is said to have stated that he had been looking for MacLennan for some time but had not been able to find him. It is stated that Kelly said he would require and receive complete personal satisfaction before he was through with Mr. MacLennan.

panies in placing sentinel overseers over the native workers is leading to ill treatment and abuses by the companies and as having provoked a number of bloody conflicts.

Military expeditions against the natives have become rare but the commission points out that such expeditions are liable to assume the character of war operations and therefore the commission recommends the passage of a law strictly defining who is capable of ordering operations.

Charges Sustained.

The commission lengthily examined the charges of the mutilation of the bodies of the natives. Missionaries and natives affirmed that they had seen baskets containing a score of severed hands. Rev. Mr. Clark said he saw a number of severed hands which appeared to have been smoked, and several individual cases were specified of natives having their hands severed. Some of these natives appeared before the commission.

The report points out that the mutilation of their bodies is an ancient custom of the natives and that all the cases of mutilation presented were attributable to natives. The commission therefore concluded that there was no testimony showing that the whites had been guilty of mutilations.

As the various abuses were chiefly within the concessions, the report recommends a rigid surveillance of the concessions.

The report generally is favorably in regard to the schools, native soldiery and courts.

PAUL DE ROULEDE, AN EXILE, RETURNS

PARIS, Nov. 5.—Paul De Rouledo, founder of the League of Patriots, arrived in Paris this afternoon after an exile of six years. He was met at the station by a large crowd which gave him an enthusiastic welcome and escorted him through the city singing the "Marseillaise." Careful precautions had been taken to prevent disorder.

It is expected that M. De Rouledo will be re-elected to the chamber of deputies and further that he will take an important part in the proceedings of that body.

FALL FROM A CAR RESULTS FATALLY

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 5.—W. H. Olsted, supposed to be a traveling man from St. Paul, Minn., was thrown from a Sellwood car at East Sherman and East Eleventh streets last night and today died at the Good Samaritan hospital. The blowing out of a fuse caused the car, which was traveling rapidly, to stop suddenly and Olsten, who was standing on the steps of the car, was thrown heavily to the ground. The man died without regaining consciousness.

FURTHER DETAIL CONCERNING ODESSA ANTI-JEWISH RIOTS; NEW YORK HEBREWS PROTEST

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Telegraph claims to possess ample documentary evidence that the anti-Jewish riots had nothing to do with the manifesto granting a constitution, but were systematically organized weeks ago by persons claiming to be partisans of the autocracy who obtained recruits from among the off-scourings of society. The promulgation of the constitution and the attendant demonstration, says the correspondent, afforded a welcome opportunity for the execution of this nefarious scheme.

Dispatches to the Daily Telegraph and the Daily Mail confirm the horrible nature of the anti-Jewish attacks at Odessa, and estimate the dead and wounded at thousands. They state that General Kaulbars proclaimed that anyone found looting would be summarily shot. Jews seeking to escape were dragged out of trains and murdered. They were chased even over the roofs of houses and killed, while persons suspected of harboring Jews were roughly handled.

The Daily Mail's correspondent asserts that the revolutionaries in Kishineff seized artillery from the troops and bombarded Jewish shops and houses. The railway says the correspondent was in possession of the rioters so that escape was impossible. The [illegible] completely sacked and partly [illegible] by fire. A provisional government has been established.

ODESSA RIOT CASUALTIES NUMBER NEARLY 6,000

ODESSA, Nov. 5.—6:00 p. m.—A tour of the city and part of the suburbs today found all quiet. Whole rows of shops that were pillaged have been boarded up. The poorer Jewish quarters suffered worst and the principal streets, with few exceptions, were untouched. Russian shops are marked with crosses painted on the shutters and the private houses with ikons so as to protect them from mobs. Peasants armed with scythes and knives tried to enter some stores for loot but they were driven back by the soldiers.

The casualties in Saturday's disturbances exceed 140 and those of the preceding three days which have been verified, number nearly 5,600. The plundering continued early this morning in the outlying districts but today the city was relatively calm, though the population is still anxious.

The latest accounts of the devastation in the Jewish quarter add horror to the situation. Besides numerous mills all the bakeries, shops and nearly 600 homes have been destroyed. The Jews killed in every circumstance were treated with revolting barbarity. Heads were battered with hammers, nails were driven into the bodies, eyes were gouged out and ears sliced. Many bodies were disemboweled and in some cases [illegible] was poured over them so that [illegible] in cellars and they were burned to death.

It is alleged that the police and soldiers everywhere marched at the head of the mobs, inciting them to attack the Jews by crying, "The Jews have killed our emperor," and similar [illegible].

While the mobs were engaged in slaughter, the soldiers busied themselves pillaging for cash and jewelry, leaving the household goods to the mobs. The owners of many shops rid of the bandits by the payment of a ransom to the police. The police prevented anyone from arresting the leaders and prevented also the Red Cross workers from aiding the wounded. A band of students removed much of the stolen property to the university and also took 12 bodies of anti-Jewish demonstrators, whose relatives today besieged the university, claiming the corpses and demanding the release of those demonstrators who were confined in the university. They threatened otherwise to burn the university and kill the professors. Measures were thereupon taken to transfer these prisoners to the regular prisons.

popular uprising can we achieve our aim, which is a constituent assembly."

Great Grave.

While the news received from the provinces indicates that something like normal conditions are being restored in many regions, the situation continues grave in the Baltic provinces, the Caucasus, Odessa and other places in the south where the outrages generally have taken an anti-Jewish nature.

Thomas E. Heenan, American consul at Odessa, has sent a telegram to the American embassy saying that since Tuesday the bloody attempts upon the Jews have continued and that he estimates the number killed in thousands. Artillery, he says, has been employed to suppress the rioting and the Jews have fired from windows upon the troops in the street. Fortunately, he adds, thus far American interests are unaffected.

Fatal encounters between the soldiers and the populace and anti-Jewish excesses are reported from many places in the provinces. Yesterday and today at Kremenchug 30 persons were killed and 80 injured. At Kutaisi a military train was wrecked and nine soldiers were killed. After the collision the revolutionaries opened fire on the train and the troops replied. There were several killed or injured on both sides. At Berdechoff several persons were killed or injured and at Minsk serious rioting arose through the troops preventing a meeting of city [illegible]. The troops fired volleys into the crowds and there was intermittent firing for a long time. A hundred were killed and [illegible] wounded. [illegible] are being wounded every day. THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT IN COLORADO'S DEVELOPMENT

John C. Martin, the Brilliant Newspaper Man Who Is Secretary of the Denver Business League, Discusses the Commercial Outlook for the State.

John C. Martin, best known and ablest of all Colorado's newspaper men, was a guest at the Alamo yesterday and is spending today at Cripple Creek, where he goes in the interests of the Denver Business league, of which he is secretary, and General George C. Cook, the president. While he is among the last of the old school of newspaper makers, of which Horace Greeley and James Gordon Bennett were the founders Mr. Martin was really the earliest advance agent of that system of emphasizing the news value and human interest feature of a story which has been exaggerated into yellow journalism. In speaking of things the Denver Business league has to accomplish for Denver and the state, Mr. Martin said:

"It is conceded on every side that the psychological moment in the development of Colorado has arrived. New industries, abundant capital, and the indefinite of universal prosperity furnish the leverage for expansion. Denver and Colorado Springs are situated in the center of a virgin field that appeals to capital for investment. Now is the time to act. A central office for the alert for opportunities, will help every business. Eastern Colorado, which has been neglected for forty years, is now on the eve of development through the application of deep soil cultivation that dispenses with irrigation.

"Mineral development is too well known to call for special comment, while the timber resources have scarcely been touched. With the recognition of New Mexico as a commonwealth of the union, Colorado business men should be in a position to gain the reward of enterprise, by being the first to enter the field. Arizona, Texas and old Mexico are also within the legitimate territory tributary to Colorado cities and they should control the trade of this southern country. Kansas City and Chicago now claim the field.

"With a little tact, backed by knowledge of trade conditions and rate-making, we are confident of securing an adjustment of freight rates which will result in greatly increasing the business of Colorado merchants, manufacturers and jobbers. The time is ripe for such a movement. The energetic action of the Interstate Commerce commission in checking rebates, furnishes the cue to a policy for enforcing the rights of every community. There is no desire, or necessity, to antagonize the railroads, for we are confident that when the subject is presented to them in a proper manner, they will concede our just demands."

With regard to Colorado's claim upon tourists in the winter, Mr. Martin said: "Colorado has overlooked its advantages and attractions as a winter health resort. It is not suggested that we invite chronic invalids to come to Colorado during the winter months to find a special curative agency. The healing properties of this climate are too well known to need any recommendation on that score. What we need, and must have, is the advertising of the invigorating qualities of this atmosphere during the months when the rest of the country is wrapped in storms. The south and the Pacific coast have acquired great reputations for their balmy atmosphere; but to the business man of the north and east, the sudden transition proves enervating; it is not what they seek; they want nature's tonic and the vitalizing breezes of Colorado, tempered with the hours of daily sunshine."

AMUSEMENTS

"THE GIRL FROM KAY'S."

The big company which is to be seen in the production of the English farcical comedy with music, "The Girl From Kay's," at the Opera house tomorrow evening, is said to be one of the best organizations ever gotten up for the exploitation of a piece of this class. The production is made by the Miller-Kirkpatrick company and is said to have cost a small fortune. Bobby North, the comedian of the company, is credited with being one of the most legitimately amusing actors on the American stage. The part he plays is that of a rich man who is a cad and is using his money in an effort to get into high society. A pretty milliner attracts his attention and she leads him a merry dance until it occurs to him that he might propose marriage. The milliner is played by Miss Lila Blow, who was for several seasons the leading woman of E. E. Rice's company. There are another pair of lovers played by Ethel Morton, a charming blonde, and George Tuchy. Paul Decker plays the part he originated in the London production, that of a silly young Englishman of good family but no money and not above lending his prestige for a consideration to help along another's desire to get into society. Kathleen Clifford uses her voice in the part of a maid, and Alex. Francis is seen as the porter in an English hotel. Helene Salliger, Harry Hanlon, Frank Lyon and Maurice Lavigne are among the fifty people who move throughout the piece. The music in the comedy is said to be very melodious and catchy and the gowns worn by the numerous young women to be decidedly handsome.

"SHADOWS ON THE HEARTH."

The name of Arthur C. Alston, whose company is to appear in "Shadows on the Hearth" at the Opera house on next Saturday evening, has for many seasons been synonymous with admirable production, clean, wholesome and absorbing plays staged intelligently and conscientiously, and interpreted by casts of the most excellently balanced merit. Former successful productions of his, such as "Tennessee's Pardner," "At the Old Cross Roads," "Pretty Peggy" and others, are still pleasantly remembered by the theater patrons here. What a manager has done in the past is the best assurance of what he will do in the future, and there is, therefore, every reason to expect a thoroughly enjoyable presentation of "Shadows on the Hearth," which enjoyed a most prosperous run of 150 nights in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and other metropolitan cities, as it will be presented here especially as it was seen in the larger cities, including the original cast of 20, headed by Eaton Williams and James M. Brophy, who have been featured many seasons with Manager Alston's various attractions. The story of the play, which revolves about the fate of two little boys of Alsace, at the outbreak of the war, makes the noble sacrifice possible in a woman, is said to be remarkable not only because of its human interest, but also because of its striking originality. The scenes are laid in the village of ... New Jersey, on the picturesque Delaware river, and the period is that of the Civil war.

The French government some time ago expressed a wish that the bones of French soldiers who died while prisoners in the Franco-Prussian war should be returned to France. Emperor William has now ordered that this be done, and that military honors shall be rendered in every instance.

MAN KILLS GIRL WITH IRON BAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—With her skull crushed by a blow with an iron bar, the still warm body of Gussie Leicher, a frequenter of tenderloin resorts, was found today in the room in which she lived in West Twenty-eighth street. The police believe that she was killed by a man with whom she lived in a quarrel caused by her refusal to account to him for all her earnings. Attention was called to the tragedy when a woman living in the house heard sounds of quarreling, followed by a heavy fall, and then saw a well-dressed man dart from the girl's room and run down-stairs. Beside the body was a heavy piece of bar iron wrapped in newspaper and stained with blood.

PAINFUL PERIODS

Suggestions How to Find Relief from Such Suffering.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to be the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality. If it is painful or irregular something is wrong which should be set right or it will lead to a serious derangement of the whole female organism.

More than fifty thousand women have testified in grateful letters to Mrs. Pinkham that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes painful and irregular menstruation.

It provides a safe and sure way of escape from distressing and dangerous weaknesses and diseases.

The two following letters tell so convincingly what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do for women, they cannot fail to bring hope to thousands of sufferers.

Miss Nellie Holmes of 540 N. Davision Street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Your medicine is indeed an ideal medicine for women. I suffered misery for years with painful periods, headaches and bearing-down pains. I consulted two different physicians but failed to get any relief. A friend from the East advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and no longer suffer as I did before. My periods are natural; every ache and pain is gone, and my general health is much improved. I advise all women who suffer to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. Tillie Hart, of Larimore, N. D., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I might have have been spared many months of suffering and pain had I only known of the efficacy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for I have tried so many remedies without help.

"I dreaded the approach of my menstrual period every month as it meant so much pain and suffering for me. But after I had used the Compound two months I became regular and natural and am now perfectly well and free from pain at my monthly periods. I am very grateful for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound rests upon the well-earned gratitude of American women.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your sickness you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address Lynn, Mass.

A VICTOR MINER INSTANTLY KILLED

B. J. A. MOYEN DRILLS INTO MISSED SHOT IN THE PORTLAND—INQUEST MAY BE HELD.

Special to The Gazette.

VICTOR, Nov. 5.—B. J. A. Moyen drilled into a missed charged in a drift of the second level of the Portland No. 2 at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and was instantly killed in the explosion that resulted. A piece of the machine or a rock was driven through his neck by the force of the explosion. Coroner Gerrett viewed the remains and may hold an inquest. Moyen was 39 years of age and lived with his wife and two adult children in this city. He was a member of the local lodge of Masons.

POLICE SHAKE-UP IS TO OCCUR TOMORROW

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 5.—It is rumored that the threatened shake-up in the police department will occur at the regular session of the board of aldermen next Tuesday evening. The police board held a meeting this afternoon, and while no member of it would talk for publication, it is gathered that all but two members of the force are to go. One regular and two specials resigned last week. It is understood that the offense charged is violation of rules, but what violation officials decline to say.

SMOOT CASE TO BE DISPOSED OF SOON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Senator Burrows of Michigan, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, who has arrived in Washington for the coming session of congress, said tonight that he expected to have the case of Reed Smoot of Utah disposed of before the term ends. Senator Smoot's seat is being contested on the ground that he is a member of the Mormon church. Senator Burrows said that if it is decided to present further testimony the committee is willing to hear it. He ... immediately after the reassemblage of the senate.

TO [illegible] OPERA HOUSE AT EL PASO

TOPEKA, Kas., Nov. 5.—L. M. Crawford left today for El Paso, Texas, to arrange with Henry Myar for the rebuilding of the Myar opera house, which was destroyed by fire Saturday night. He will meet Mr. Myar at El Paso Tuesday. Mr. Crawford stated that his company would erect a temporary building to be used as a theater at El Paso until the Myar theater is rebuilt.

THREE MINERS UNDER ARREST

DISPUTE OVER OWNERSHIP OF VALUABLE PROPERTY IS THE CAUSE THAT IS ATTRIBUTED.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 5.—Dispute over the ownership of the Captain claim of the Portland estate is believed to have something to do with the arrest this morning of N. H. Scully, John Condon and Wm. McKenzie. They were taken at the mine by Constable Frank Shearer on a warrant issued from Justice Lewis' court charging them with the theft of $20 worth of ore from the Captain claim. The complaining witness is F. W. Smale, superintendent of the Portland mine. The defendants say the claim upon which they are working is the F. and C. C. and not the Captain, and that it is owned by Ed Schaeffer, former surveyor for W. S. Stratton and the Portland mine. They recently struck a valuable shoot at a depth of 200 feet. It is understood that they have been warned several times to leave the property. Scully and associates feel that they have been injured by arrest. They gave $200 bail for their appearance at court tomorrow afternoon.

DEMONSTRATION MADE AT VIENNA YESTERDAY

VIENNA, Nov. 5.—The Socialist suffrage demonstration on the Ring Strasse today was attended by 50,000 persons. A strong force of gendarmes was stationed along the streets but did not interfere with the demonstrations and the Socialists were even permitted to hoist red flags over the reichsrath building. There were no disorders and similar demonstrations are reported from Lemberg, Klagenfurt, Bruenn and elsewhere. The Neue Freie Presse states that Premier Gautsch Von Frankenthurn will introduce a universal suffrage bill at the reopening of the reichsrath.

ROOSEVELT CONFERS WITH CORRESPONDENTS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—President Roosevelt has had a conference with a number of the representative newspaper correspondents at the national capital respecting the best method of making public such matters of general interest as might develop in the cabinet council. A satisfactory understanding was reached which amounted to the reservation of the right of the executive to preserve the secrecy of the cabinet as an advisory body to the president, while the newspaper men may be given any proper information touching public business that develops in each of the departments by the various heads.

RICHMOND, Ind., Nov. 5.—Arthur J. Stobbard, of St. Paul, Minn., who was recently appointed major general of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, by Supreme Chancellor Charles S. Shivelley, of Richmond, will remove the head office of the uniform rank from Indianapolis to St. Paul. At the present time the membership of the uniform rank is placed at 37,000.

AN INSANE MINER SHOOTS TWO MEN

WOUNDS ARE SERIOUS, BUT VICTIMS WILL RECOVER. SEARCH FOR MANIAC IS UNAVAILING.

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 5.—A. K. Arpin, whose home is at Salt Lake City, and J. C. Dolive of Orlando, Fla., were shot and seriously wounded this afternoon a short distance from this city by a man supposed to be insane. The men are telegraph operators and were walking in the hills. They had passed a mining dump a few feet when a bullet struck Arpin in the left thigh. Another fired almost immediately, struck Dolive in the groin. Two other shots were fired, one striking Dolive in the arm and the other hitting Arpin in the groin. Dolive took refuge behind a rise in the ground and saw a man running away. The wounded men were brought to town and, while their wounds are serious, they are not believed to be mortal. An insane man has been reported in the hills near Helena for several days and the sheriff's officers have been hunting for him. It is believed he is the man who did the shooting. A search in the hills until night for the man was unavailing. The insane man is laboring under the belief that some one is trying to jump his mining claim.

EXTREME MEASURES NECESSARY.

THE action of the Colorado Springs company in bringing suit against the owners of certain property is only the inevitable result of the persistent violation of law by the tenants of the property.

It has been simply forced by those druggists who have so repeatedly violated the law that no other course remained. They themselves absolutely compelled the drastic measures which have at last been taken. The circumstances are such that it was a matter not of choice but of necessity and the full weight of all responsibility for the consequences rests upon the violators of the law.

They and their few adherents have been indifferent to the odium which attaches to frequent arrests and convictions in police court. They have been undaunted by the verdict of a jury in a higher court. For the sake of the profit that there was in it they have defied and derided the law. Action which will forever deter anyone from giving them a place in which to carry on their nefarious business will perhaps affect them in a more vulnerable spot.

The effect of this action upon those who have ignored the well-known clause in the deeds to their property will be a severe but not unjust penalty. They have had an abundance of warning. They have been given every chance to act for their own safety and have even been urged to do so. They have knowingly and deliberately taken the risk, and they have lost. Next to the lawbreakers to whom they have given shelter the responsibility rests upon themselves.

Colorado Springs was designed as a city of homes and every precaution was therefore taken to prevent any possibility of evil conditions ever gaining a foothold. The plan has proved successful and Colorado Springs today owes its reputation as a residence city to the strong character and foresight of its founders. The action taken Saturday is simply carrying out the original policy, in the determination to preserve the fundamental and essential character of the city.

TUESDAY'S ELECTIONS.

AN extraordinary degree of interest attaches to a number of elections to be held tomorrow, which under ordinary circumstances might be considered of very minor importance. It is an "off year" in politics. We do not believe that in any of this fall's elections there is any real party issue involved. In many cases partisanship, even in state elections, has been relegated to the background: Massachusetts and Rhode Island for example, each of which will elect a governor on Tuesday, have in times past voted one way on state issues and the opposite on national issues. The chief issue in this fall's campaign in most of the states and cities where elections are to be held has been good government as against graft and the political boss.

The greatest interest undoubtedly centers in two municipal elections. Although only city officers are to be elected the issues are so directly those of good government that the outcome is of great importance not only locally but throughout the country.

PHILADELPHIA.

In Philadelphia Mayor Weaver is making a great magnificent fight against political corruption. Tuesday's election will be the first test, by vote of the people, of the political strength of those who are trying to free the city from graft as opposed to those who thrive on corruption. The motives and the power of those who are arrayed against Mayor Weaver and his reform administration may be judged from the statement that three public service corporations whose illegal schemes have been blocked by Mayor Weaver have lost in the market value of their stocks and bonds approximately $40,000,000. The effort to check fraudulent contracts has necessitated the discharge of from seven thousand to eight thousand men. Five powerful corporations are furnishing the "sinews of war" and directing the fight against the man who has cut off between $3,000,000 and $6,000,000 a year in illegal profits distributed among the public service corporations and the army of political workers who have grown up with the "machine." Fortunately an honest election can be reasonably assured. No less than 56,000 fraudulently registered names have been taken off the lists and it is clearly understood that arrest for every person attempting to vote in fraud on election day is no idle threat. The re-election of Mayor Weaver will mean not only a great victory for the city of Philadelphia but a great impetus to the cause of good government everywhere.

In New York city the importance of the election of William Travers Jerome for district attorney has been lessened in these columns within the course of the past week. There are three candidates in the field for mayor. George B. McClellan is a candidate for re-election. It is admitted that in many respects he has given the city a good administration, but he is the Tammany candidate and his re-election will inevitably result in building up the Tammany organization until New York will be as firmly in its grasp as ever. The Republican candidate is William M. Ivins, a man comparatively little known in politics during the last ten years, but at one time quite prominent and thoroughly familiar with municipal affairs. His nomination is in itself an illustration of the present tendency toward non-partisanship in municipal government. Mr. Ivins at one time served as city chamberlain, as an anti-Tammany Democrat. Of late years he has voted with the Republicans on national issues but he is running as strictly independent and has not hesitated to assert his independence since his nomination. The peculiar personality of the third candidate in the field makes any definite predictions of the outcome very difficult. William R. Hearst is running on a municipal ownership platform. It is probable that the great majority of Republicans would regard his election as a greater disaster than the re-election of McClellan, but the most bitter and vindictive fight against Hearst has been made by Tammany itself. Rioting has been caused by red flags and placards denouncing him as an anarchist and a few days ago the postal authorities confiscated a quantity of post cards sent out by Tammany which bore the strong insinuation that Hearst, through articles published in his papers, was responsible for the assassination of President McKinley.

In view of the fact that it was impossible to secure a fusion of anti-Tammany forces, McClellan's election was for a time thought certain. He still appears to [illegible] makes the situation very uncertain.

Jerome for district attorney will probably draw the full vote of all the reform and good government forces. The Republican candidate has withdrawn in Jerome's favor, although a technicality keeps the latter's name off the ticket. Jerome's victory would be a national victory for the cause of good government.

OHIO.

In Ohio a state election is to be held. Here also is evidence of a strong feeling against bossism. Governor Herrick is a candidate for re-election, his Democratic opponent being John M. Pattison. In his opening speech Mr. Pattison declared his campaign was "a battle for clean politics, honest and economical administration of public affairs and against bossism and graft." The normal Republican majority in Ohio is in the neighborhood of 200,000 and it is felt by a great many good Republicans in the state and elsewhere that if in this election there should be a material reduction of this majority the party leaders in the state might be able to read the handwriting on the wall and bring about a reform within the party before a disruption occurs. There is no practical danger of a Democratic victory nor does the cause of good government require it. But there is nevertheless hope of a significant rebuke to bossism and the campaign has had valuable educative features.

ELSEWHERE.

The state of New Jersey is contributing a very interesting chapter to the history of the fight against political bossism. The champion of independence and honesty in this case is a young man by the name of Everett Colby who is running for the state senate. His nomination was a blow to a powerful and thoroughly organized machine and his campaign has attracted much interest.

In San Francisco John S. Partridge, a brilliant young lawyer, is a fusion candidate for mayor backed by a strong coalition of both Democratic and Republican business men, against Mayor Schmitz, who, it is said, has disappointed his former adherents and has allowed graft and corruption to gain a strong foothold in municipal affairs. Mr. Partridge is at present city attorney and in strength and fearlessnes is compared with Jerome and Folk.

In Rhode Island there is a state election and the Democrats there are claiming that their fight is being made on the issue of corporation influence in politics. It is significant that the Democratic state platform commends Roosevelt, for his attitude on tariff revision and railroad legislation. Governor Utter, Republican, is a candidate for re-election, his opponent being Dr. Garvin, who, when Roosevelt received a plurality of nearly 17,000 votes, came within less than 900 votes of securing the governorship for the Democrats.

There are interesting features in connection with the elections in Massachusetts, Maryland and Salt Lake City but the issues are not directly connected with the particular phases of the question of good government which enter more or less into all of the campaigns of which detailed mention has been made.

The indications are that the cause of good government will win notable victories on Tuesday, but even if defeat should come the benefits of bringing such issues to the front for public discussion are incalculable.

Alamosa has organized a board of trade which will work in the interests of that city and the San Luis valley. Every organization of this kind when properly conducted is of advantage to the whole state. Alamosa is to be congratulated on its spirit of enterprise.

The United States board on geographic names has decided that certain islands in the Pacific ocean shall henceforth be known as the Marianas and not as the Ladrones. There is a good American sound about the Marianas, but why not spell it Mary Anna's?

It is unfortunate that certain periodical publications base their payments for manuscripts on the number of words. If any arrangement of this kind is to be made it ought in some way to place a premium on brevity rather than on length.

"Patronize Home Industry" will be the motto of the Colorado State Manufacturers exhibition, to be held in January. It is a good motto and one worthy of emphasis in all ways possible.

A Story of Love, War and Witchcraft in Old Geneva

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN

OR what desire to escape it? None, he told himself. None. But he who fights best when blows are to be struck and things can be done finds it hard to sit still when it is the inevitable that must be faced. And while Claude told himself that he had no desire to escape, since escape for her was impossible, his mind sought, desperately, the means of saving all. The frontier lay but a league away. Conceivably they might lower themselves from the wall by night; conceivably his strength might avail to carry her those few miles to the frontier. But, alas! the crime of witchcraft knew no frontier; the reputation of a witch once thrown abroad, flew fast as the swiftest horse. Before they had been three days in Savoy, the women would be reported, seized and examined; and their fate at Epaugny or Bonneville would be no less tragic than in the Bourg du Four of Geneva.

Yet, something must be done, something could surely be done. But what? The bravest caught in a net struggles the most desperately, and involves himself the most hopelessly. Claude felt himself caught in a net. He felt the deadly meshes cling about his limbs, the ropes fetter and benumb him. From the sunshine of youth, from freedom, from a life without care, he had passed in a few days into the grip of this anagke, this dire necessity, this dark ante-chamber of death. Was it wonderful that for a moment, recognizing the sacrifice he was called upon to make and its inefficacy to save, he rebelled against the love that had drawn him to his fate, that had led him to this, that in others' eyes had ruined his? Ay, but for a moment only. Then with a heart bursting with pity for her, with love for her, he was himself. It it must be, it must be. The prospect was dark as the room in which he stood, confined and stifling, sordid, shameful; the end one, which would make his name a marvel and an astonishment. But the prospect and the end were hers too; they would face them together. Haply he might spare her some one pang, haply he might give her some one moment of happiness, the support of one at least who knew her pure and spotless. And while he thought of it—surprise or surprise—he bowed his head on his folded arms and wept.

Not in pity for himself, but for her. It was the thought of her gentleness, her loving nature, her harmlessness—and the end, this, the reward this—which overcame him; which swelled his breast until only tears could relieve it. He saw her as a dove struggling in cruel hands, and the pity which, had there been chance or hope of any to smite, would have been rage, could find no other outlet. He wept like a woman, but it was for her.

And she who had descended unheard, and stood even now at the door, with a something almost divine in her face—a something that was neither love nor compassion, maid's fancy nor mother's care, but a mingling of all these, saw, and her heart bled for him. Her arms in fancy went round him, in fancy his head was on her breast, she comforted him. She, who a moment before had almost sunk down on the stairs, worn out by her sufferings and the strain of hiding them from her mother's eyes, forgot her weakness in thought for him.

She had no contempt for his tears. She had seen him stand between herself and her tormentors, she had seen the flash of his eye, she had heard his voice, and knew him brave. But the fate, for which long thought and hours on her knees had prepared her—so that it seemed but a black and bitter passage with peace beyond—appalled her for him; and might well appall him. The courage of men is active, of women passive; with a woman's instinct she knew this, allowed for it, and allowed, too, for another thing—that he was fasting.

When he looked up, startled by the tinkle of pewter and the rustle of her skirt, she was kneeling between the settle and the fire, preparing food. He flattered himself that in the dark she had not seen him, and when he had regained his self-control he stepped to the settle-back and looked over it.

"You did not see me?" he said.

She did not answer at once, but finished what she was doing. Then she stood up and handed him a bowl. "The bread is on the table," she said, indicating it. She was a woman, and, dare as it was, she kept the disfigured cheek averted from him.

He would have replied, but she made a sign to him to eat, and, seating herself on a stool in the corner with her plate on her lap, she set him an example. Apart from her easy attitude, and the droop of her head, he might have deemed the scene in which they had taken part a figment of his brain. But round them was the gloom of the closed room.

"You did not see me?" he repeated, presently.

She stood up. "I would I had never seen you!" she cried; and her anguished tone bore witness to the truth of her words. "It is the worst, it is the bitterest thing of all! of all!" she reiterated. The settle was between them, and she rested her hands on the back of it. He stooped, and, in the darkness, covered them with kisses, while his breast heaved, with the swell of the storm which her entrance had cut short. "For all but that I was prepared," she continued. "I was ready. I have seen for weeks the hopelessness of it, the certain end, the fate before us. I have counted the cost, and I have learned to look beyond for—for all we desire. It is a sharp passage, and peace. But you," she continued on the same tragic note of monotony, "are outside the sum, and spoil all. A little suffering will kill my mother, a little! a very little fear. I doubt if she will live to be taken hence. And I—I can suffer. I have known all, I have foreseen all—long. I have learned to think of it, and I can learn by God's help to bear it." And in a little while, a very little while, it will be over, and I shall be at rest. But you—you, my love—"

Her voice broke, her head sunk forward. His lips met hers in a first kiss; a kiss salted by the tears that ran unchecked down his face. For a long minute there was silence in the room, a silence broken only by the low, articulate murmur of love—love whispered brokenly on her tear-wet lips, on her cold, closed eyelids. She made no attempt to withdraw her face, and presently the murmur grew to words of defiance, of love that mocked at peril, mocked at shame, mocked at death, having assurance of its own, having assurance of her.

They fell on her ears as warm thaw-rain on frozen sward; and slowly into the pallor of her face, the whiteness of her closed eyelids, crept a tender blush. Strange that for a few brief moments they were happy; strange, proof marvellous of the dominance of the inner life over the outer, of love over death.

"My love, my love!"

"Again," he murmured.

"My love, my love!"

But at length she came to herself, she remembered. "You will go?" she said. She put him from her and held him loudly at arm's length, her hands on his shoulders. "You will go? It is all you can do for me. You will go and live?"

"Without you?"

"Yes. Better, a hundred times better so for me."

"And for me? Why may I not save you—and her?"

"It is impossible!"

"Nothing is impossible to love," he answered. "The nights are long, the wall is not too high. No wall is too high for love. It is but a league to the frontier, and I am strong."

"Who would receive us?" she asked sadly. "Who would shelter us? In Savoy, if we were not held for sorcery, we should be delivered to the Inquisition."

"We might gain friends?"

"With what? No," she continued, her hands pleaving more tightly to him, "you must go, dear love! Dear love! You must go! It is all you can do for me, and it is much! Oh, indeed, it is much! It is very much!"

He drew her to him as near as the settle would permit, until she was kneeling on it, and in spite of her faint resistance he could look into her eyes. "Were you in my place, would you leave me?" he asked.

"Yes," she lied bravely. "I would."

But the flash of resentment in her eyes gave her voice the lie, and he laughed joyfully. "You would not!" he said. "You would not leave me on this side of death!"

She tried to protest.

"Nor will I you," he continued, stopping her mouth with fresh kisses. "Nor will I you till death! Did you think me a coward?" He held her from him and looked into her reproachful eyes. "Or a Tissot? Tissot left you. Or Louis Gentilis?"

But she made him know that he was none of these in a way that satisfied him; and a moment later her mother's voice called her from the room. He thought, having no experience of a woman's will, that he had done with her, and in her absence he betook himself to examining the differences of the house. He replaced the bar which he had wrested from the window, wedging it into its socket with a morsel or two of molten lead. The windows of the bedrooms, his own and Louis', looked into a narrow lane, the Rue de la Cite, that ran at the back of the Corraterie in a line with the ramparts; but not only were they almost too small to permit the passage of a full-grown man, they were strongly barred. Against such a rabble, as had assaulted Anne, or even a more formidable mob, the house was secure. But if the law intervened neither bar nor bolt could save them.

He fell to thinking of this, and stood arrested in the middle of the darkened room that, as the hours went by, was beginning to take on a familiar look. The day was passing, all without remained quiet, nothing had happened. Was it possible that nothing would happen? Was it possible that the girl through long brooding exaggerated the peril? And that the worst to be feared was such an outbreak as had occurred that morning? Such an outbreak as might not take place again, since mobs were fickle things.

He dwelt awhile on this more hopeful view of things. Then he recalled Bastenga's threats, the Syndic's face, the departure of Louis and Grio; and his heart sank as lead sinks. The rumor so quickly spread—by what hints, what innuendoes, what cunning inquiries, what references to the old, invisible bed-ridden woman, he could but guess—that rumor bore witness to a malice and thirst for revenge which were not likely to stop at words. And Louis' flight? And Grio's? And Bastenga's?—for he did not return. To believe that all this, taken together, the raid and the outrage of the morning, portended anything but danger, anything but the worst, demanded a hopefulness that even his youth and his love could not compass.

Yet, when she descended he met her with brave looks.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE GOLDEN WATER.

Blondel's thin lips were warrant—to such of the world as had eyes to see—that in the ordinary things of life he would have been one of the last to put faith in a man of Bastenga's stamp; and one of the first, had the case been other than his own, to laugh at the credulity he was displaying. He would have seen—no one more clearly—that, in making the bargain he had made, he was in the position of a drowning man who clutches at a straw; not because he believes that the straw will support him, but because he has no other hope, and is loath to sink.

He would have seen, too, another thing, which indeed he did see dimly. This was that, talk as he might, make terms as he might, repeat as firmly as he pleased, "The Remedium first and then Geneva," he would be forced, when the time came, to take the word for the deed. If he dared not trust Bastenga, neither dared the scholar trust him. Once safe, once snatched from the dark fate that scared him, he would laugh at the notion of betraying the city. He would snap his fingers in the Paduan's face; and Bastenga knew it. The scholar, therefore, dared not trust him; and either there was an end of the matter or he must trust Bastenga, must eat his own words, and, content with the possession of something, must wait for proof of its efficacy until the [illegible] cast.

In his heart he knew this. He knew that on the brink of the fatal extremity to which the Syndic's and Bastenga were slowly pushing him it might not be in his power to check himself; that he must trust, whether he would or no, and where instinct bade him place no trust. And this doubt, this suspicion that when all was done he might find himself tricked, and learn that for nothing he had given all, added immeasurably to the torment of his mind; to the misery of his reflections when he awoke in the small hours and saw things coldly and clearly, and to the fever and suspense in which he passed his days.

He clung to one thought and got what consolation he could from it; a bitter and saturnine comfort it was. The thought was this; if it turned out that, after all, he had been tricked, he could but die; and die he must if he made no bargain. And to a dead man what matter was it what price he had paid that he might live? What matter who won or who lost Geneva, who lived, who died, who were slaves, who free?

And again, the very easiness of the thing he was asked to do tempted him. It was a thing that to one in his position presented no difficulty and scarcely any danger. He had but to withdraw the guards, or the greater part of them, from a portion of the wall, and to stop on one pretext or another—the bitter cold of the wintry weather would avail—the rounds that at stated intervals visited the various posts. That was all; as a man of tried loyalty, instrusted with the safeguarding of the city, and to whom the officer of the watch was answerable, he might make the necessary arrangements without incurring, even after the catastrophe, more than a passing odium, a breath of suspicion.

And Baudichon and Petitot? He tasted, when he thought of them, the only moments of comfort, of pleasure, or of ease, that fell to his lot throughout these days. They would thwart him no more. Petty worms, whose vision went no farther than the walls of the city, he would have done with them when the flag of Savoy fluttered above St. Pierre; and when for the confines of a petty canton was substituted for those who had eyes to see, and courage to adapt themselves, the wide horizon of the Italian kingdom. When he thought of them—and then only—he warmed to the task before him; then only he could think of it without a shiver and without distaste. And not the less because on that side, in their suspicion, in their grudging jealousy, in their unwinking integrity, lay the one difficulty.

A difficulty exasperated by the insult that, in a moment of bitter disappointment, he had flung in Baudichon's face. That hasty word had revealed to the speaker a lack of self-control that terrified him, even as it had revealed to Baudichon a glimpse of something underneath the Fourth Syndic's dry exterior that might well set a man thinking as well as talking. This matter Blondel saw plainly he must deal with at once, or it might do harm. To absent himself from the next day's council, or to show himself backward, might rouse a storm beyond his power to weather; or, short of that, might give rise at a future day to a dangerous amount of gossip and conjecture.

He was early at the meeting, therefore, but to his surprise found it in session before the hour. This, and the fact that the hubbub of voices and discussion died down at his entrance—died down and was succeeded by a chilling silence—put him on his guard. He had not come unprepared for opposition; and to meet it he had wound himself to a pitch, telling himself that after this all would be easy; that he had this one peril to face, this one obstacle to surmount, and having succeeded might rest. Nevertheless, as he passed up the Great Council Chamber amid that silence, and met strange looks on faces that were wont to smile, his courage for one moment, even in that familiar scene, conscience makes cowards of all—wavered. His smile grew sickly, his nerves seemed suddenly unstrung, his knees shook under him. It was a dreadful instant of physical weakness of mental terror under the eyes of all. To himself, he seemed to be self-betrayed, self-convicted!

Then—and so brief was the moment of weakness no eye detected it—he moved on to his place, and with his usual coolness took his seat. He looked round.

"You are early," he said, ignoring the glances, hostile or doubtful, that met his gaze. "The hour has barely struck, I believe?"

"We were of opinion," Fabri answered, with a dry cough, "that minutes were of value."

"Ah!"

"That not even one must be lost, Master Blondel!"

"In doing?" Blondel said in a negligent tone, still insisted to [illegible] he were ignorant of the matter, "in doing what, if I may ask?"

"In doing, Master Syndic," Fabri answered sharply, "that which should have been done a week ago; and better still a fortnight ago. In issuing a warrant for the arrest of the person whose name has been several times in question here."

"Bastenga?" [illegible]

"The same."

"You may save yourselves the trouble," the Syndic replied, with a little contempt. "The warrant has been issued. It was issued yesterday, and would have been executed in the afternoon, if he had not got wind of it, and left the town. And let me say one more word on this," Blondel continued, leaning forward and speaking in sudden heat, before anyone could take up the question, "That word is this. If it had not been for the importunity of some who are here, the warrant had not been issued, the man had still been within the walls, and we had been able still to trace his plans. We had not been as we now are, and as I foretold we should be, in the dark, ignorant from which quarter the blow may fall, and not a whit the wiser for the hint given us."

"You have let him escape!" The words were Petitot's.

"I? No, I have not let him escape. But those who forced my hand to do it retorted in passion, so well simulated, that it swept away the majority of his listeners. "They let him escape! Those who had no [illegible] tience nor craft! Those whose [illegible] tion of statesmanship, whose [illegible] method of making use of the dangerous [illegible] we had under our hand was to [illegible] up! Only yesterday morning I [illegible] with him."

"Ay?" Baudichon cried, his eyes glowing with dull passion. "You [illegible] with him? And he went in the afternoon! Mark that!" He turned quickly to his fellows. "He went in the afternoon! Now, I would like to know—"

Blondel stood up. "Whether I am a traitor?" he said in a tone of fury, and he extended his arms in [illegible] "Whether I am in league with the Italian, I, Philibert Blondel, of Geneva? That is what you ask, what you want to know! Whether I sought him yesterday in the hope of worming his secret from him, of doing what I could for the benefit of the state in a matter too delicate to be left to underlings? Or whether, one with him, to betray my country? To sell the Free City? That—that is what you ask?"

His passion was full, overpowering, convincing; so convincing—it [illegible] stopped his speech—that he [illegible] it himself, so convincing that it swept away all but his steady and professed opponents. "No, no!" cried a dozen voices, in tones that reflected his indignation. "No, no! Shame!"

"No?" Blondel took up the word, his eyes sparkling, his adust complexion heated and full of fire. "But if I do—yes, they answer! Yes, they say whom you have to thank if we have lost our [illegible] they who met me going to him yesterday and threatened me! Threatened me!" he repeated, in a voice of astonishment. "Me, who desired only, sought only, was going only to do my duty! I used yesterday, I admit the fault. I do not strive to defend it," he allowed his voice to drop to a tone more like his own, "words that I now regret. But is blood water? Does no man besides Councillor Baudichon love his country? Is the suspicion, the open suspicion of such a one, no insult, that he must cavil if he be repaid in insult? I have given my proofs. If any man can be trusted to sound the enemy, it is I! But I have done! Had Messer Baudichon not pressed me to issue the warrant, not driven me beyond my patience, it had not been issued yesterday. It has been in the office, and the man within the walls! Ay, and not only within, but fresh from a conference with the Sieur d'Albigny, primed with all we need to know and in doubt by which side he could most profit!"

"It was about that you saw him," Petitot said slowly, his eyes fixed like rivets to the other's face.

"It was about that I saw him," Blondel answered. "And I think in a few hours more I had won him. But in the street he had some secret word of warning, for when I handed the warrant—against my own will—to the officers, they, who had never lost sight of him between gate and gate, answered that he had crossed the bridge and left the town an hour before. Mon Dieu!"—he struck his two hands together and stopped his teeth—"when I think how foolish I was to be overridden, I could—I could say more, Maître Baudichon—with a saturnine look—than I said yesterday!"

"At any rate the bird is flown," Baudichon replied, with sullen temper. "That is certain. And it was you who were set to catch him!"

"But it was not I who scared him," Blondel rejoined.

"I don't know what you would have had of him!"

"Oh, I see that plainly," said Fabri. "He was an honest man, at least prejudice, and long the [illegible] between the two parties."

"I thank you [illegible] drily. "But, by your leave, I will [illegible] to it clear to M. [illegible] who will doubtless like to know [illegible] I would have had of "I" [illegible] and place and circumstances of the attack, if such be in [illegible] when I knew all, I [illegible] the deputations, not only to [illegible] the city, but to give the [illegible] such a reception that Poly should ring with it! Ay, and [illegible] an end for the rest of our lives to [illegible] treacherous attacks."

HARPER'S BOOK NEWS.

The Conquest of Canaan

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

The growing volume of enthusiasm and praise which has attended the serial publication of the story in Harper's Magazine warrants the assertion that this is the greatest novel that Booth Tarkington has written.

It is the story of the winning of a woman and the winning of honor, a story so overmastering in its intensity of interest, so sweeping in sympathetic enthusiasm, that the reader, carried away in spite of himself, forgets all but the fortunes of Her and of Him, the woman and the man to whom the author has given life.

THE YANKEE LOCATION

Yankee Doodle was a German. His real and only origin has been traced easily as many times as Patti toured this country on a positively farewell trip. But the Gesellschaft für deutsche Philologie got together in Berlin the other day and settled the matter. Professor Lewalter stood up in meeting and announced that the tune of "Yankee Doodle" is a Hessian folk song or popular dance—that came along with the Hessians who invaded America with our friends the English in 1776. This settles the matter once and for all. Yankee Doodle is not the one thing in this world that is not Irish.

Justice Field's Opinion.

"The validity of the condition is assailed by the defendant as repugnant to the estate conveyed. His contention is, that as the granting words of the deed purport to transfer the land, and the entire interest of the company therein, he took the property in absolute ownership, with liberty to use it in any lawful manner which he might choose. With such use the condition is inconsistent, and he therefore insists that it is repugnant to the estate granted. But the answer is, that the owner of property has a right to dispose of it with a limited restriction on its use, however much the restriction may affect the value or the nature of the estate. Repugnant conditions are those which tend to the utter subversion of the estate, such as prohibit entirely the alienation or use of the property. Conditions which prohibit its alienation to particular persons or for a limited period, or its subjection to particular uses, are not subversive of the estate; they do not destroy or limit its alienable or inheritable character. The reports are full of cases where conditions imposing restrictions upon the uses to which property conveyed in fee may be subjected have been upheld. In this way slaughter houses, soap factories, distilleries, livery stables, tanneries and machine shops have, in a multitude of instances, been excluded from particular localities, which, thus freed from unpleasant sights, noxious vapors, or disturbing noises, have become desirable as places for residences of families. To hold that conditions for their exclusion from premises conveyed are inoperative, would defeat numerous arrangements in our large cities for the health and comfort of whole neighborhoods.

Liquor Clause Valid.

"The condition in the deed of the plaintiff against the manufacture or the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage at any place of public resort on the premises, was not subversive of the estate conveyed. It left the estate alienable and inheritable, and free to be subjected to other uses. It is not unlawful nor against public policy, but, on the contrary, it was imposed in the interest of public health and morality."

Justice Field here made reference to similar cases from other states, and continued:

"We have no doubt that the condition in the deed to the defendant here is valid and not repugnant to the estate conveyed. It is a condition subsequent, and upon its breach the company had a right to treat the estate as having reverted to it, and bring ejectment for the premises. A previous entry upon the premises or a demand for their possession was not necessary. By statute in Colorado it is sufficient for the plaintiff in ejectment to show a right to the possession of the premises at the commencement of the suit, as heir, devisee, purchaser or lessee. The commencement of the suit stands in lieu of entry ... demand."

FUNDS ARE AVAILABLE FOR ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Work on the new administration building for the Colorado School for the Deaf and Blind will be commenced within 30 days, for the trustees have been notified that part of the $40,000 state appropriation is available.

This announcement has been made by a member of the board of directors, and T. P. Barber, a Colorado Springs architect, is drawing plans for the new building. If the estimates submitted are within a specified limit the contract will be let immediately.

Mr. Barber is drawing two sets of plans, and a meeting of the committee composed of Messrs. Humphries, Eaton, Gottlieb and Argo, will be held in a short time to determine whether they are satisfactory. It has not been given out when this meeting will be held, but Mr. Barber has been instructed by the committee to get the plans out as soon as possible.

Forty thousand dollars has been appropriated for the new building and half of this amount is now available, the other half will be available next year, but the exact time is not known. It is understood that the commission does not plan to spend the entire $40,000 in erecting the building, but that several thousand dollars will be reserved for additional improvements. It is expected the building proper will cost between $30,000 and $35,000.

It is probable that the new building will be erected in front of the main building of the school. It will be used for the general offices, library and superintendent's home. A number of novel features are included in the plan and both from a standpoint of architectural appearance and convenience it will be the finest building on the institute grounds.

ADEQUATE FIRE PROTECTION FOR EAST SIDE RESIDENTS

The residents of the east side will be gratified to learn that they are soon to have adequate fire protection, through the efforts of Fire Chief Armbruster and the fire committee of the city council.

The equipment of the central and north end stations is to be replaced with new apparatus and that now in use in the north end will be sent to the station on the east side, which will probably be located somewhere in the vicinity of St. Francis hospital.

There is to be a new aerial truck of the latest design with a 75-foot ladder installed at the central station. A new hose wagon and engine will also be bought to take the place of those now in use, which will be sent to the north end station.

All the horses, with possibly one or two exceptions, will be sold and new ones bought. That these changes will be made soon is evidenced by the fact that all the horses not in service regularly, have been brought in from pasture, and are now being offered for sale at the station in the north end.

The improvements planned will be made without any costs to taxpayers. The fire department has by its economy enough funds left in its appropriation to carry it through the fiscal year besides enough to help materially in securing new equipment.

PHOTOGRAPH RECOGNIZED

DETECTIVE SHULTZ GETS ADDITIONAL EVIDENCE BEARING ON MT. CUTLER MURDER MYSTERY.

C. E. Shultz, city detective, has returned from Berkeley, Cal., where he secured additional evidence that the man who murderously assaulted and robbed William Ellis, an Australian horseman, was Milton Franklin Andrews, who is wanted in Colorado Springs for the murder of Bessie Bouton on Mount Cutler last December.

Shultz showed Ellis a photograph of the suspected murderer and he instantly recognized it as a likeness of the man who assaulted him. The Colorado Springs detective identified the clothing left by Andrews, and Chief Adams and the other authorities are certain that one man committed both crimes.

"The Berkeley police could have arrested Andrews had they known he was wanted for the crime here," said Police Chief Adams. "That is, a greater effort to get him into custody would have been made and it would probably have been successful. We have no tangible clue as to Andrews' whereabouts. There is, of course, a better chance to pick up the trail than before he committed the crime in Berkeley."

Detective Shultz did not go to California to run down the Andrews affair. His family was with him on a pleasure trip.

ROMANCE OF CAMPING TRIP

SEC. ARNOLD OF THE BOYS' DEPARTMENT AT Y. M. C. A. TO WED KANSAS CITY GIRL THANKSGIVING.

Jesse Garfield Arnold, secretary of the Boys' department of the Colorado Springs Y. M. C. A., and one of the best known young men in this city, is to enter the ranks of the benedicts. Announcement was made yesterday that he would wed Miss May Husted, formerly of Kansas City but now of Cripple Creek, at the latter's home Thanksgiving day.

A pretty romance is attached to the meeting of those young people. Miss Husted came west from Kansas City three years ago and was camping a few miles from Cripple Creek with relatives. One day a party of young men, including Mr. Arnold, passed the camp, and, in the course of a brief conversation, became acquainted with Miss Husted. The casual acquaintance grew into a friendship and then into an affair of two hearts. Mr. Arnold visited Miss Husted at her Kansas City home a year ago and returned to Colorado Springs with a promise that she would be his bride.

Miss Husted is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Husted, and the sister of Raymond S. Husted, treasurer of the State Christian Endeavor union. Mr. C. E. Husted is a well known banker of Cripple Creek.

Mr. Arnold is a son of Mrs. J. R. Arnold, of Cripple Creek, and has resided in Colorado Springs four years. He has been in charge of the Boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. for the last three years and has been very successful in his association work. He is president of the El Paso County Anti-Cigarette league.

After the wedding ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Arnold will make a tour of the state. They will reside in this city.

FAWN KILLED BY BULL PUP

ALDERMAN JOHN J. COUGHLIN, OF CHICAGO, LOSES PET FROM MENAGERIE IN IVYWILD.

A vicious dog has played havoc with Alderman John J. Coughlin's zoo at Ivywild. The dog, which belongs to Francis Gilpin, of Broadmoor, is a large bulldog, and it was last Friday that he went to the zoo with the children of Mr. Gilpin and other children of Broadmoor. The little folks were playing around outside of the fence when the dog espied one of the fawns, recently purchased by Mr. Coughlin. In the twinkling of an eye he had grabbed the fawn by the throat. It was but a few moments until the dog had worn the animal out and dragged it into the water. The men in charge of the grounds rushed to the scene but were too late to save the fawn. Mr. Coughlin is in Chicago at present, but the keeper of the animals says that some action will be taken.

A PATROLMAN GIVES YOUNG GIRLS A TIP

"Some of these 15-year-old girls who have been promenading the streets at night will be surprised when they find themselves in the hands of the juvenile court," said a patrolman last night.

"Just a few minutes ago five of them came near getting in a hair pulling fight on the main street. One of them insisted that another one had called her a name and that she had to take it back. When I spoke to them they promised to go home right away.

"The practice of 'bumming' around the town after dark is not common with young girls, but it is too frequent, even if it only happens once or twice. Parents are too neglectful, but if they can't keep their young girls off the streets the police can and I, for one, will."

GROWTH OF ORE PRODUCTION IN THE LEADVILLE DISTRICT

MINING DEVELOPMENTS OF WEEK IN GILPIN COUNTY

CENTRAL CITY, Colo.—It is reported that some high grade ores are being found in the old workings of Gilpin County in the Quartz hill which have recently been started up. It is said that under the management of Chas. Cox a new plant [illegible] has been installed [illegible] a frame building erected and Manager Cox has been carrying on some development work with promising indications. Those who are acquainted with the property and its surroundings predict a bright future for the property with liberal development.

Work has been resumed on the East Whitlock mine by the Grand Central Mining company on Quartz hill and the company intends to sink the shaft a further depth of 200 feet, which will make the total depth 600 feet. In sinking the shaft the ultimate depth of 300 feet [illegible] the drift is in a strong vein of [illegible] carrying [illegible] Work is being carried on [illegible] drift [illegible] the shaft [illegible] drift [illegible] Lower drift was [illegible] the [illegible] drift [illegible] the [illegible] drift [illegible] the [illegible] drift [illegible] should [illegible] the [illegible] drift [illegible] Work is being carried on [illegible] drift [illegible] the [illegible] drift [illegible] the [illegible] drift [illegible] the United States Marine Hospital Service has taken charge the Italian situation has greatly improved.

It is explained that this result has been brought about largely by the uniforms worn by the United States Marine Hospital physicians. Taught by generations of ancestors to recognize in the uniform the badge of authority, the lower class of Italians show a deference and obedience to the uniformed officials of the federal service that they would not show to the local physicians or health officers in civilian dress.

The fact must not be lost sight of in the consideration of the sanitary or quarantine legislation brought before Congress, that it will mean far more than the suppression of epidemics in this country; that it will assure a sanitary education and advance that means improvement in every line in health, production and clean and comfortable living. This has been found possible only through a body organized and controlled by the federal government, superior to local prejudices and influence and able to act equally and justly to all.—New York Commercial.

A RESEMBLANCE.

Jacob Riis, the sociologist, in an address to a workingmen's club, praised generosity.

"I see a handful of children here," he said, "and I pray they grow up generous. May none of them grow up like such a man as an old banker whom I know.

"He is a millionaire banker, and he lives in a palace, but his heart is as hard as steel and as cold as ice.

"One of his men completed, the other day, his twenty-fifth year of service. For twenty-five years this honest man had worked for the banker faithfully. He and his chief were both poor at the beginning, but where, in the quarter century, the banker has accumulated millions, the faithful, middle-aged bookkeeper has accumulated only a few hundreds. His salary, you see, was only $25 a week.

"He didn't think the banker would remember the twenty-fifth anniversary of his engagement, but the old man did. That morning he handed the bookkeeper a sealed envelope.

"'George,' he said, 'today ends the twenty-fifth year of your work for me, and you have worked steadily and well. In this envelope is a memento of the occasion.'

"The bookkeeper opened the envelope trembling and eager. Within lay his employer's photograph. That was all.

"In the face of a disappointment so bitter the poor fellow could say nothing.

"'Well,' asked the banker, 'what do you think of it?'

"'It's just like you,' said the bookkeeper simply.'—Los Angeles Times.

TO DECIDE THE CHAMPIONSHIP. Colorado Springs High vs. Centennial, at Pueblo.

Saturday, November 11th. Only $1.25 round trip via C. & S. special train, leaving Colorado Springs 9:30 a. m.

A curious memento of the whaling industry of Monterey in Mexico remains in the pavement leading up from the street to the west door of the Church of San Carlos de Borromeo, one of the churches founded by the Spanish missionary fathers, and is still in excellent repair. The round, mushroom-like objects in the pavements are the vertebrae of whales.

INTERMENT—The funeral services of John Herman Brown, who died at the home of his parents, near Pike View, last Friday morning, were held from Carrington's undertaking rooms yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. E. E. Carrington officiated. Interment took place at Evergreen.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. Julia C. Toler, of 21 East Vermijo, left yesterday morning for Denver for a three months' visit with her friends.

General William J. Palmer, accompanied by the Misses Palmer and a party of eastern friends, left Saturday night over the Rock Island for New York in General Palmer's private car.

CONSTIPATION.

Health is absolutely impossible, if constipation be present. Many serious cases of liver and kidney complaint have sprung from neglected constipation. Such a deplorable condition is unnecessary. There is a cure for it. Herbine will speedily remedy matters. C. A. Lindsay, P. M., Brooson, Fla., writes, Feb. 12, 1902: "Having used Herbine, I find it a fine medicine for constipation." 50c a bottle. Sold by Hefley-Arcularius Drug Co.

English automobile manufacturers are experimenting with wire wheels in the belief that, weight for weight, they are stronger than those of wood of the artillery variety. This would be a practical return to first principles, as all the early types of self-propelled vehicles were equipped with wire wheels.

MUSIC CAUSED MOUSE'S DEATH

SPELLBOUND BY MELODY, TINY RODENT DANCED UNDER MUSICIAN'S FOOT AND WAS CRUSHED.

Music! Prof. Frederick Julius Curth drew a violin bow across his piano-like Amati last evening, flooding the corridors of the Alamo with melody, a timid mouse came creeping from some [illegible] and danced about the floor before the amused spectators as though intoxicated by the harmony.

More than 100 persons witnessed the unique demonstration of the fascination of music for mice. When the last faint cry of the sobbing violin had faded into silence, like the haunting memory of a fairy land dream, the tiny creature scampered under the piano to the counterpoint of the pretty pianist who blushed with the gentleness of the old-fashioned velvet rose.

Prof. Curth received an encore. Again at the first responsive wail of the sensitive instrument Mr. Mouse came forth from his hiding place to attend the tuneful sound, closer and closer crept the small intruder until under the feet of the player. The creature was entranced. It sat up very much as some greater animal might have done, and apparently drank in every note. All unconscious of the presence of his strange worshiping little auditor, Prof. Curth kept time with the piano by beating a tattoo with one foot. Under the influence of the music the mouse, unheedful of the motion of the violinist's foot crept under it and raised itself in the same spellbound manner as before. The foot came down as the violin trembled in the glory of a crescendo and no one heard the cry of the tiny life that went out.

Prof. Curth quietly dropped his handkerchief like a shroud over the miniature body and the concert proceeded unheedful of the tragedy.

MANY TRIBUTES PAID THE DEAD

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL SERVICES WERE HELD YESTERDAY FOR MRS. J. A. HIMEBAUGH.

The funeral of Mrs. J. A. Himebaugh was attended by a large concourse of people. The capacity of the First Methodist church was taxed and after the service a long line of carriages formed the procession to Evergreen where the earth about the grave was covered with evergreen. At the church the casket was covered with a profusion of flowers. The Rev. T. B. Wilcox read the first part of John XIV and the latter portion of Revelations VII. He spoke with feeling of the beautiful and exalted life of the woman who is dead. A quartet, consisting of Miss Laura Sandstedt, Charles Hart, Miss Luella Fitch and Frank Hart, sang, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," "Lead Kindly Light" and "Nearer My God to Thee." The pallbearers were E. J. Eaton, O. E. Hemenway, W. S. Morris, L. A. Puffer, J. P. Safford and Harwell P. Knight.

In the course of his sermon the Rev. T. B. Wilcox paid the following tribute to the dead.

"She was a queen among women, beautiful in person, winsome and attractive in manner, amiable in disposition, and that naturally amiable and beautiful disposition was consecrated and beautified by the spirit of Jesus, whom she sought to follow and to give expression to that spirit in her life."

HANDY MAN'S ODD JOBS.

"I do many queer jobs," said the handy man.

"I made a secret panel for a manufacturer's office last month. Unbeknownst, from his inner office, this manufacturer can now see everything that is done and hear everything that is said by his twenty clerks. Poor fellows, they had better be careful. Two of them were fired last week.

"A man with a shaved head got me to make him a telescope ladder. He was a convict. When they arrested him he had the ladder in a suit case.

"Rich people like secret drawers in desks and tables, and secret compartments in their bedroom floors to hide things in. I have a big run on that kind of work."—Philadelphia Bulletin.
